ÉTO COFFEE

Seoul, Korea, Republic of

In the exhibition “Lost in Translation”, the designer made use of the industrial materials to construct the frame of a house, demonstrating the idea of how self-building has become a norm for people. Domesticity used to be detached from brick and mortar, or the value of a mortgage. But now, it means dealing with the social relationships between members of temporary groups, as well as the nomadic aspects of mobility. One minute films were played in the exhibition room, showing how the way people live has been influenced by the changed parameters.
